Professor Audrey Osler

Audrey Osler is Professor of Education at the University College of South East Norway and at the University of Leeds, where she founded the Centre for Citizenship and Human Rights Education. Her research addresses human rights, social justice, and democratic citizenship education policy and practice, in established democracies and post-conflict societies. She has a long-standing interest in the place of narrative and life history in education research and practice and her PhD (published as The Education and Careers of Black Teachers – 1997, Open University Press) examined the contribution of minority teachers to transformative education. She has held professorships and visiting professorships at universities in Europe, the U.S. and East Asia. In 2015 she was awarded an invitation research fellowship by the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (JSPS). Audrey Osler acts as expert to a number of international bodies, including Council of Europe, European Commission and UNESCO.
